So the CwG statement that “there's no such thing as right and wrong” is not an argument for abandoning our current notions about what is right or wrong. It is an argument for being clear that our notions are precisely that; our notions. They represent our current ideas about things. This has nothing to do with objective reality.

~~What is 'Right' and What is 'Wrong'? — Neale Donald Walsch~~

Right and wrong are the following or breaking of rules that are sanctioned by their utilitarian value. A proposed "middle ground" between these two types is Two-level utilitarianism , where rules are applied in ordinary circumstances, but with an allowance to choose actions outside of such rules when unusual situations call for it.
